ENGINEER M'BEAN HAS ONE HALF ACROSS THE HARLEM.

It Is 226 Feet Long, 31 Feet Across, With Pallsadoed Sides and a Tight Roof, and Half the Hariem River Tunnel Be Built in the One Box.

D. D McBean of the engineering and contracting firm of McBean & McMullen has put into practice in the Rapid Transit tunnel under the Harlem River at 144th street a plan of under-water tunnelling which he believes is entirely new The system has been working for a week with thoroughly satisfactory results

When Mr. McBean first made his plan other engineers scoffed at it. As he says, he bet the capital of his firm that he was right and now he knows that he has won the bet. Mr McBean believes that his plan is applicable to Hudson River and Detroit River tunnelling and that it is much simpler, safer and cheaper than any other plan which has been suggested for tunneling through muddy river bottoms

The McBean plan, as nearly as a layman can grasp it, is to drive two parallel rows of timber sheathing, tongued and grooved together, far enough apart to include between them the completed tunnel. They are driven much deeper than the bottom of the tunnel is to be. Some excavating is done between them with dredges as though in an open cut. Then the sheathing is trimmed off along the top to a true level, under water. A dam of sheathing is built across the end and a watertight timber roof is laid on top. The sheathing, the dam at one end and the shore at the other, and the roof thus form the top and sides of a box under water of which the bottom is the river-bed mud. There are valves in the roof, through which men, machinery and materials can be introduced, through a manhole which protrudes above the surface of the water. Enough air is pumped into the box to keep up a pressure which equalizes the pressure of the water on the outside of the box.

In the Harlem River the top of a caisson thus built was sunk on June 6. Work has been going on in the big box ever since. There were twenty-three feet of mud and water to be taken out. Part of this was taken out before the roof was put on the box, and now only seven and a half feet r mains. A centrifugal pump is used for gesting the thick mud out. There has been very little leakage of water into the caisson. A six inch centrifugal pump handles all the leakage.

The caisson is 226 feet long and 31 feet

The caisson is 225 feet long and 31 feet wide. It reaches from the west shore of the Harlem almost half way across the river. When the caisson is emptied of mud and earth and water, the masonry tunnel will be built inside of it just as though it were a house being built in open air. All the materials will be lowered through the protonical tules and water. air. All the materials will be lowered through the protrucing tubes and underwater valves. When the tunnel in the caisson is finished the caisson will be lifted and the west half of the river will be opened to navigation—there are temporary piers and docks built on both sides of the caisson and docks built on both sides of the caisson now—and a new caisson will be built from the middle of the river to the east side.

The old way of building the tunnel would have been to construct cofferdams above and below the line of the tunnel and do the work in an open dry cut—children-of-Israel-crossing-the-Red-Sea fashion. In a channel like that of the Harlem this was not only very difficult to plan, but very expensive to execute. Mr. McBean did not see it at all. Another way of making the tunnel would have been to drive a tube forward by sections from one side of the river to the other, under the mud. Then forward by sections from one side of the river to the other, under the mud. Then all materials would have had to be taken in through a shaft on shore and carried out into the tunnel on a submarine railroad, greatly increasing the inconvenience and danger of working.

Mr. McBean is preparing an article for one of the scientific publications in which he intends to have some fun with the engineers who said that under-mud work couldn't be done that way. He will also call the attention of the contractors for the the attention of the contractors for the Pennsylvania tunnel to his plan. It isn't

FIRST SEA SERPENT OF 1903. Was Chasing a School of Sharks-Had a

Dragon's Head and Big Tusks. PHILADELPHIA. June 13 .- Second Mate Gray of the steamer Tresco, which arrived at Port Richmond from Santiago to-day with a cargo of iron ore, reports having seen a sea serpent of a particularly atrocious kind. He is backed up by Capt. W. H. Bartlett, the other officers and the crew, all of whom are prepared to make affidavits. Mate Gray saw the monster first, but Capt. Bartlett told the story. He said they were ninety miles north of Hatteras,

"Mr. Gray saw a school of sharks running wildly. Behind them seemed to be a dere-lict. We steamed up. It raised out of the water and the thing horrified us. Supported on a neck that rose above the water fifteen feet was the head of a dragon, with two monster tusks. It was 100 feet long, with a body like a snake, tapering to a dragon-shaped tail. It looked at us and made off. It left a stifling odor."

RIOT IN "MIXED ALE ROW."

Harlem Block Stirred by a Fight Between Police and a Gang of Toughs.

The block in East 103d street between Second and Third avenues, known as "Mixed Ale Row," was the scene of a small riot early last evening. The trouble began in front of Michael Lynch's blacksmith shop at 238 East 103d street.

A gang of young men, who, according to Lynch, have got into the habit of lounging in front of the shop, were there last evening and when Lynch warned them to leave they paid no attention to him. Then he ordered them to go away and one of them struck him in the jaw and knocked him

Lynch ran back into the shop, picked up a revolver and fired three shots. He says he fired them into the ground merely to frighten the gang. The police were not able to find that he struck anybody. Lynch then got inside the shop and barricaded the door, but the gang, headed by "Lefty Jim" Reynolds breke the door down.

The shooting draw a crowd from all directions and when Policeman Steinkamp came over from Third avenue he couldn't reach the blacksmith's shop, where he could hear the fight that was going on between Lynch and the gang. He got several police-men off post to assist him and somebody summoned the reserves from the East 104th street police station.

When the police arrived in force, the gang and their friends fled to the roofs of the houses across the street and began to shower bricks on the heads of the bluecoats. police ran up after them and cleared the roofs by firing into the air.

They also arrested Revnolds as he was climbing down the airshaft of one of the tenements. Then they arrested Lynch, Patrick Murphy and John Rayhing. On the street they found William Cronin of 200 East 104th street lying unconscious with a fractured skull. He was sent to the Harlem roofs by firing into the air. TUNNEL CAISSON, NEW STYLE, MRS. SAMUEL M. HAMILL DEAD. Her Long Connection With the Lawrence

Matilda M. Hamill, the widow of the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Hamill, for fifty years the head of the school at Lawrenceville N. J., died early yesterday morning. She was born in Lawrenceville, Jan. 2, 1818, and was in her eighty-sixth year. She was a direct descendant of Jonathan Dickinson, the first president of Princeton and for one hundred and fifty years her family have been closely connected with the educational interests of the country. Her father was Richard Green, who was graduated at Princeton in 1775, and after a successful business career retired to Lawrenceville. She had four brothers. There was no school in Lawrenceville, and the pastor of the church, the Rev. Dr. Alexander Brown, a relative, started what is now so widely known as the Lawrenceville School in order to educate her brothers and five cousins. The school was started in 1810 and has a history of ninety-three years.

The present school grounds at Lawrenceville comprise 250 acres, and there are 300 boys at the school.

One of the cousins referred to was John C. Green, who afterward amassed a large fortune, several millions of which were given to Princeton and for the rebuilding and endowment of the Lawrenceville School. Her grandfather, George Green, was president of the Board of Trustees of Princeton before the Revolutionary War, and as such wrote a letter, now in the State Library at Hartford, asking the Governor of Connecticut the privilege of holding a lottery for the benefit of Princeton. Since then different members of are 300 boys at the school.

her family have sat in the faculty and

Her mother's father, Col. Thomas Henderson of New Jersey, was a member of Gen.
Washington's staff during the Revolution.
Col. Henderson stood by Washington at the battle of Monmouth and, it is said,
heard the vigorous language addressed
by him to Gen. Lee on that occasion.

by him to Gen. Lee on that occasion.

Mrs. Hamill was a remarkably handsome woman and of great intellectual force. She is well remembered by hundreds of old Lawrenceville boys now living all over the world. She had nine children, three of whom are living—Hugh H. Hamill, a lawyer of Trenton, N. J., Mrs. E. P. Wood, the wife of a clergyman of Trenton, and Samuel A. Hamill, for a number of years prominently connected with the General Electric Company in Schenectady.

In addition to these she adopted and brought up five children of Charles and Sidney Green, her brothers. She was in full possession of all her faculties to the time of her death. She never wore glasses. She devoted the latter years of her life to her friends and to reading the general literature of a large and valuable library which she had collected through a long life.

ELIZABETH C. ADAMS DEAD. Last Surviving Granddaughter of the Second President Passes Away.

QUINCY, Mass., June 13.-Miss Elizabeth oombs Adams, daughter of Thomas Boylston Adams, the oldest son of President John Adams, died at her home here to-night aged 95. She was the only surviving grandchild of the second President and during the administration of her uncle, John Quincy Adams, spent much of her time in Washington, where she was very popular. She was present when Lafayette met her grandfather and other patriots at the laving of the cornerstone of Bunker Hill monument of the cornerstone of Bunker Hill monument and was with her grandfather when he died here in 1826.

Miss Adams travelled extensively in Europe, where she met many distinguished persons. Her father married a Miss Herrod, one of the belles of Newburyport and lived in the little red house on the Braintree road while John Adams was in Washington. Upon the latter's return Thomas Adams had to move on account of lack of room.

Miss Adams had four brothers and one sister. Until the last few years her home was shared by her brother, Isaac Hull Adams, to whom she was devoted. Within the last year Miss Adams became feeble rapidly. There are at present none of her relatives living in Quincy, but during the summer her nephew, Brooks Adams, resides in the old family mansion at Quincy

SECRETS OF CATTLE RUSTLERS

CONFESSIONS FROM MEN WHO HAVE STOLEN 500,000 ANIMALS.

The Gang Has Been in Existence for Twenty Years and Has Killed Forty Men-Known as the Circle-Had Control of Politics-Five Men Have Confessed.

OACOMA, S. D., June 13 .- The "Circle," a secret organization of cattle and horse rustlers, who have looted Lyman, Pratt and Presho counties of 500,000 cattle and killed forty men in twenty years, and who were bound by a blood oath, has been exposed in the confessions of members of the society just arrested by Detective C. H. Wilkie. From Claude Eagle Pipe, Henry Pipe, William Blackball and Moses Goodvoce, halfbreeds, and Alfred Nelson, a ranchman, separate and corroborating confessions have been obtained. In the days when South Dakota was young, a tall, bony, red-mustached man, without a past, came to the Dakotas. His name was Jack Sully. He built his hut on a high hill and gathered twenty-five confederates about him. Officers of the law always found the place deserted, and berry pickers were warned away by bullets at their feet. Two Nelson boys, Olf and Charles, came a few years later and settled on opposite sides of the range country.

About these small beginnings the "Circle' society was built, and now its members number nearly 1,000. Their members were sworn to secrecy with blood drawn from their arms. John Bathene, County Attorney, the only man who has dared prosecute them, woke up one night after two arrests with his house burning over his head. He has been shot at repeatedly.

Last fall Jack Sully was caught. He tried to kill Pete Waugh, a dissatisfied victim. He escaped, however, aided by his allies. Sully has killed seven men including his father. One of the few murders for which the gang was held responsible was that of Mat Matson, a homesteader, whose only offence was to settle opposite Phelps Island, in the line of the cattle

The Circle is known to have included many supposedly respectable ranchmen, who were always lined up with the rustlers in political fights. So widespread was the influence of the Circle that for years until last fall they controlled nearly all the county offices. Olf Nelson, one of the leaders was elected by his gang.

Their power and desperate methods terrorized opposition and it was not until Wilkie, disguised as a rustler hired by the State Stockmen's Association, was admitted to the secrets that the gang was brought to bay

Their plan was to steal a bunch of cattle or horses, and drive to the place of the nearest member, where the brands were worked over and the stock was passed on from member to member. If caught they would refer officers to Indians who would similarly refer the officers to others until the trail was lost. If hard pushed the stolen stock would be pushed over the line of the Rosebud reservation and taken in charge by Indians. There were many confederates among the Sioux, led by Joe Blackbird. If the members of the gang were really threatened with prosecution they would fice to the Bad Lands, where pursuit is impossible. They used four distinct drives in taking their cattle to market. Of late years they have handled as much as 100,000 head of cattle and 10,000 horses.

QUAKER CITY POLICE SHAKE-UP. Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia Suspends Three Officials.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13 .-- Mayor Weaver's eform administration has begun its long threatened police shake-up. Following the suspension of Lieut. Edward T. Fulmer, of the Eighth district, on the charge of failing laving and other of law in his district, the announcement was made to-day by Director of Public Safety Smith that charges had been entered against Police Captain G. W. Thompson and Lieut. Benjamin A. Tomlinson of the Thirtyfourth district, and that they had also been ordered to appear for trial before the Police Court of Inquiry of which Capt. Thompson has been a member.

Failure to enforce the reform administration orders caused their suspension. The Eighth district is in the heart of the Tenderloin. The Thirty-fourth is far down town. All three men have long been members of the force. Two other Lieutenants are scheduled for suspension.

BAR AMBULANCE DOCTOR.

Neighbors of Woman Who'd Taken Polson Wouldn't Let Her Go to Hospital.

Mrs. Sarah Keenan, a widow, of 544 West Thirty-fifth street took a fatal dose of carbolic acid at her home at 6 o'clock last evening. The police say she took it with intent to kill herself. When Policeman Kelly and Dr. Bull of the Roosevelt Hospital got there Mrs. Keenan's sons and daughters objected strenuously to her removal to a hospital, and called in the whole neighborhood to prevent it.

Kelly sent a boy after the reserves at the West Thirty-seventh street police station and got them. They dispersed the crowd, but by this time Dr. Bull had got tired of waiting and left without the woman. Finally Police Captain Ferris took a hand in he trouble and summoned an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital.

The woman was taken away in that three hours after she had taken the poison. he died soon after she reached the hospital.

DITCHED AN EXPRESS TRAIN Switchman Did It to Avoid & Collisio

SCRANTON, Pa., June 13 .- The presence of mind of Martin H. McMasters, a signal man at the Carbon street crossing of the Delaware and Hudson road, prevented a serious collision to-day. To do this McMasters was forced to ditch a passenger train, the Saratoga Express. At Carbon street there is a switch which all passenger trains on the Delaware and Hudson road take in order to reach the Lackawanna avenue station. The express, south bound, was backing out of the siding. A fast freight train, north bound, was approaching. The express to reach the southern track had to cross in front of the freight. The signal man threw the signals against the passenger train, but they were not noticed, and it came on. McMasters as a last resort ditched it. The two last cars to the train were extra, and they went over on their sides. Only trainmen were on them, and they escaped by jumping. The passengers in the regular coaches were badly shaken and scared, but no one was hurt.

BOWLED SWITCH ENGINE OVER. Express Train Hits It on the Bridge Approach at New London.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 13.-The passenger express train known as the "4", bound from Boston for New York, had a close call from being wrecked on the approach to the Thames River Bridge this evening The train, which left Boston at 3 o'clock, was in charge of Conductor Ken-yon and Engineer Reed, who reside in New Haven. It had just passed over the big bridge at a fair rate of speed at 5:40 o'clock bridge at a fair rate of speed at 5:40 o'clock when a switching engine, run by Engineer Baker, loomed up in front of the train, and in an instant there was a head-on collision.

The impact was so great that the lighter engine was picked up bodily and thrown down the embankment. The fireman jumped, but Engineer Baker stuck to the throttle, and his chances for escape alive would have been slight had not the switcher collided a second time with a telegraph pole. The jolt threw Baker headlong out of the cab and out of danger, his only injury being a deep cut in his head and a general shaking up.

The locomotive drawing the express was badly damaged in front and was thrown across the east track. No one aboard the express was injured.

St. Louis in elevating the streets will have to be done over again, as the water has undermined many of them bordering on the submerged district.

It is proposed to build a stone wall forty-two feet high from the bluffs at Alton to a point several miles below East St. Louis, a distance of over thirty miles.

Suffering continues among the thousands rendered homeiess by the inundation, though every effort is being made to supply their needs. The damage to East St. Louis, not including that suffered by the railroads, is conservatively placed at $1,000,000. More than 12,000 persons have been driven from their homes and some 2,000 buildings washed away, wrecked or carried off their foundations. No material improvement in the flood situation is expected before the middle of next week.

Thrown Under a Trolley Car. Seven-year-old Rose Robinsky, whose parents live at 724 Manhattan avenue, Greenpoint, was killed last evening in front of her home by a car of the Lorimer street line. The fatality was witnessed by the father and mother of the girl, who became almost insane from grief.

Rose had been with playmates on the opposite side of the street and set out to cross the roadway to go home. She carried a fan in her hand. The fender of the car struck her and before the motorman could stop the car two wheels passed over the brieflik lose at the kneed over the girl's legs at the knees.
The car was crowded at

The car was crowded at the time, and so were the sidewalks. It was necessary to raise the car to extricate the body. The girl was dead on the arrival of the doctor.

SMALL LAKE STEAMER SINKS. The Charles H. Davis Goes Down Off the Entrance to Cleveland's Harbor.

CLEVELAND, June 13 .- One life was lost and seven men had a narrow escape from death in the little steamer Charles H. Davis, which was dashed to pieces this afternoon in the shallow, choppy water between the west arm of the breakwater and the old water works crib. The boat's engine had refused to work, and it became unmanageable. It soon sprung a leak, which caused the sailors to work frantically at the pumps. The boat soon filled with water and sank after breaking in two. Capt. Erastus W. Haskins of Bay City, Mich., the owner and master of the boat, was drowned. The remainder of the crew, consisting of six sailors and the cook, were saved by the United States Life Saving crew. The steamer was engaged in the stone trade between Cleveland and Kelly's Bride, 14; Bridegroom, 16.

UTICA, June 13.-Lulu L. Parkhurst and Vernie B. Walker of Oneida were married on Wednesday, and the announcement causes great surprise, owing to the ages of causes great surprise, owing to the ages of the couple. The bride is 14 and her hus-band two years her senior. Documents were produced apparently showing that marriage was with the consent of the girl's parents. The fact that the girl's brother and sister were with the couple tended further to allay suspicion. The minister was told that the girl was 16 years of age. No complaint has been made by the girl's

WALK-UNDER-THE-GROUND. Aged Aboriginal Back From Sailing on the Seas. Walk-Under-the-Ground, Christian name Willie, was a second cabin passenger aboard the steamship Etruria of the Cunard Line, in last evening from Liverpool and Queenstown. He is from Buffalo Bill's show. He said he didn't like the English and wanted ne said he didn't like the English and wanted to get back to Pine Ridge and civilization. He says also that he is 91 years old, al-though he doesn't look it. He regretted, in first-class American, that he hadn't a high hat to give him the aspect of a converted aborigine. Otherwise he was dressed, save for a pair of moccasins, like the average man of the plains.

A DEVERY SILENT INTERVAL. He Didn't Orate to the Bugs and He Didn's

Visit the Colored Brothers. The Bug Club, which is two doors from Devery's house in West Twentieth street, had a masquerade smoker last night, but and a masquerade smoker last hight, but no one wore the masks that were provided and Big Bill did not appear until too late to make a speech. He wasn't speaking last night, having a cold or something. Some forty colored citizens gathered in a back room of a saloon at 436 West Twentysixth street last night, as representatives of their race in the Ninth Assembly district, and with the aid of disinterested Caucasians passed resolutions indorsing Devery for Mayor. The Devery lieutenants made speeches, but Big Bill didn't come.

UNA ABELL SUES CORSE PAYTON. She Can't Star With Him and Wants $4,905

-Ile Offers 80. Corse Payton, the Brooklyn theatrical manager, has broken his engagement with Miss Una Abell Brinker to star with him next season. The contract was signed on March 12, and the first notification that there was any trouble reached Miss Brinker one night last week when she saw a notice in the programme of the Lee Avenue Theatre that Miss Etta Reed, Corse Payton's wife, would take the leading parts next

She immediately asked for an explanation from Mr. Payton and he informed her by letter that Mrs. Payton would take her place in the company.

Miss Brinker at once instructed her lawyer to begin an action for $1,995 for alleged breach of contract and she is also suing in the Third Municipal Court for $300.50 for back salary and $289.06 for her share for back salary and $280.00 for her share of the profits from an engagement in Newark, N. J.

Mr. Payton said yesterday that he would defend any suits that Miss Brinker might start and that he believes he will be justified under a particular clause of the contract in breaking the engagement. In figuring up his accounts he finds, he says, that he owes Miss Brinker just $9, and that she can have it any time she comes for it.
